ABSTRACT

This study has examined the determinants of Private Investments in Kenya. This also examines the impact of Foreign aid on Private investment in Kenya. This is in accordance with the fact that Kenya just like any other Sub Saharan countries is faced by High unemployment, absolute poverty, high degrees of indebtedness, as well as poor economic performance. However, there are other factors as well that affect Private Investment in Kenya such as GDP, Interest rates, Gross Domestic Savings real exchange rates and Gross public Investments.

In Kenya, the backbone of Economy is agriculture therefore by expanding the agricultural and industrial sectors this shall facilitate the maintenance of the link between Gross domestic product and private investments.
